WEB DEVELOPER

I am a web developer with a background in piano teaching. As a teacher, I have insights on how people perceive and process information and how they go on about solving problems in learning how to play the piano. This intuitively helps me in my work as a developer because I have to consider similar things in web development. When developing websites, my process would initially take an experimental approach, but I have learned through my music education and web development courses the benefits of knowing the structure first and how all of its parts fit together. As a web developer, I have trained how to break problems into smaller pieces that are easier to solve.

I enjoy both front and back-end development and would be interested in working in different fields in tech.
